

SUMMARY

CICASP Seminar in Science Communication #127

JSPS DC Fellowship Application Guide #2

4PM–, Thursday, April 30, 2020 (online meeting using Zoom)

We examined examples of successful applications to the JSPS Research Fellowships for Young Scientists (RFYS) and discussed what made them effective proposals, with the focus on presentation style and structure. We then read a rough draft of this year's application by one of the graduate students, and shared our suggestions for improvement.

Materials from the previous two seminars (including presentation slides) are available in a shared Google Drive folder (see email announcement for a link).

CICASP Seminar in Science Communication #128

JSPS DC Fellowship Application Guide #3

4PM–, Thursday, May 7, 2020 (online meeting using Zoom; access details will be provided in email announcements)

We will continue reviewing and discussing rough drafts of fellowship applications* by graduate students. Once again, this workshop is primarily intended for applicants for the doctoral-level (DC1/DC2) fellowships, but everyone is welcome to join, whether you are thinking about applying next year, or have applied in the past and want to share tips with your colleagues.

*Note to all JSPS fellowship applicants: Details of application forms change from year to year, so make sure to use this year's forms (i.e., if you have applied before, don't reuse the same form from the past)!
