Marunouchi kids Jambry have been held since 2007 in Tokyo international forum. PWS, WRC, and JMC worked together to have a workshop named “Yamano-kyoshitsu”. That aimed to let people know about fieldwork and wildlife. During the three days, hundreds of people joined our workshop and they looked enjoyed it.

We set 8 topics in one exhibiting room. Even the amount of information of each topic was small, attendants could get more information through chatting with students or curators from JWS. Meeting and chatting with a lot of children was so much fun for me. Moreover, working with people from other research fields was significantly exciting. I could learn effective communication from them.
