In Tokyo, I met with Nakamura-san in her office in Shinagawa to discuss various things such as her career in documentary wildlife filmmaking (she recently completed a project on Iriomote Island about the termites there) as well as my interests and future career path options. I enjoyed and benefited a lot from our discussions, especially to learn more about the process of filmmaking in Japan and working in a small independent company. I also had my JSPS DC2 interview in Tokyo, which I am hoping went well.

I happened to pass by the Toyokawa Inari on the way to my interview, it is a beautiful temple.

6. Others
I am thankful to PWS for providing me with support to travel to Tokyo to meet with Nakamura-sensei and have my JSPS interview.
